DALY CITY'S NEW THEATRE RECEIVING FINISHING TOUCHES

Painters, decorators and furnishers are fast putting the finishing touches on Daly City's palatial new theatre, which has been under construction for the past seven months at the corner of Mission and Flournoy streets.

While no date has been set by Messrs. Edward B. Baron and C. A. Nathan, lessors, it is understood that indications point to the opening about October 15.

Baron and Nathan are well known in San Francisco film circles. They recently opened their new Marina Theatre, directly opposite the site of the 1915 Exposition. Baron was formerly manager of the United Artists' film exchange and subsequently manager of the Herbert L. Rothchild Theatres on Market street, which were later sold to West Coast Theatres. Nathan was for eleven years manager for Carl Laemmle's Universal Pictures Corporation in Northern California.

The theatre will give to Daly City a motion picture playhouse unexcelled by any community of its size. Its size is indicated by the towering structure which is visible for miles in every direction. Within, the Daly City Theatre is a thing of amazing beauty. After the present vogue in theatrical construction, it is an atmospheric theatre. This means an architectural device by which the interior is decorated to resemble an exterior.

To say that it will be a garden theatre, would be a better description. It is so constructed that the auditorium has the appearance of being encircled by an old Spanish wall. Panelled openings are cut in this wall at intervals to give fascinating glimpses of beautiful scenes which are apparently beyond the wall. There are eighteen such vistas, for the most part exquisite paintings of garden scenes.

The ceiling represents the sky and is realistically filled with summer clouds. Huge trees standing guard at either side of the organ loft will tower above the encircling walls.

Further description of the new theatre will appear in subsequent editions of the Daly City Record. The opening date will be announced soon, it is expected.

DALY CITY PLAYERS WIN ANOTHER GAME

In the language of the baseball fan, the Daly City baseball team is "going good," and there doesn't seem to be a chance of stopping them.

Last Sunday the Daly City team added another victory to their list by defeating the Excelsior Merchants 7 to 0. The Daly City boys clouted the ball all over the lot, while G. Ford, pitching for the Daly City Merchants, was unhitable, allowing but two hits and striking out ten batters.

The Daly City Merchants made 7 runs, 15 hits and 2 errors. The Exvelsior Merchants made 2 hits and 2 errors, and failed to score.

Ford and F. Strand were the Daly City battery, while Crudo and Sunstrom worked for the Excelsior ball team.

The Daly City Merchants will play the South San Francisco Redmen at the South San Francisco grounds next Sunday at 2:30.

EASTERN STAR WILL CONVENE AT CAPITAL

More than 2,000 delegates are expected to attend the fifty-fifth annual convention of the California Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, which convenes at Sacramento, Tuesday, October 16, for a four day gathering, representing 457 subordinate lodges and a total membership of more than 100,000. Sessions will be held at the American Legion Memorial Auditorium. Headquarters of the grand officers and delegates will be at the Hotel Senator.

A feature of the session will be the formal dedication, Tuesday afternoon, October 16, of the new $250,000 Eastern Star Temple, the home of the six capital city Chapters, and the only structure so far of its kind in California. It is located opposite Fort Sutter.

The fraternity enjoys an increase of more than 3,000 members for the year and the chartering of fifteen new Chapters.

Pony Killed By Bus

When a pony belonging to Mrs. Charles Merrill, of Menlo Park, deliberately walked in front of a bus on Main street, in Redwood City, the animal was instantly killed. The pony had escaped from the barn and was wandering through the street when the accident occurred.

PROGRESSIVE MOVES PROPOSED BY BOARD

The City Council met Monday evening and proposed several progressive moves for our city. These meetings are very interesting and the residents are urged to attend and learn how our city is advancing.

A communication was received from the California Automobile Association, asking that buttons be placed on the safety zone at the high school. This being against the ruling of the Highway Commission, the matter was referred to the street committee for adjustment.

A copy of uniform traffic laws was received from the California Automobile Association and was handed to the police committee for study.

A communication was received from Company No. 4, Daly City Volunteer Fire Dapartment, announcing several changes in the officers of that company—Mr. A. Amco, captain; Mr. J. Fenstermaker, lieutenant, and Mr. A. Chesney, assistant chief.

Chief Kennedy of the fire department reported meeting with the Fire Underwriters, and stated that a reduction in rates can be expected in the near future, due to the many changes in the fire department, the water system and the installation of new fire apparatus.

The street committee reported several changes being worked out on the waiting station at Mission street and Hillcrest Drive, and instructed the city engineer to draw up plans for the same.

The advertising committee reported their intention of having a Christmas tree this year, in front of the City Hall, along with an outdoor concert, expecting it to be even more successful than the one of last year. The committee makes this announcement early, so as to get the co-operation of all the residents and organizations that are interested.

The Council is considering the installation of traffic stop signals at Mission street and Hillcrest Drive, this being pointed to as our city's "bottleneck." It is hoped the signals will remedy the condition.

The Council ordered the clerk to advertise for bids on paving the Daly City Park. When this is completed, it is proposed to place play apparatus on this pavement for the benefit of the youth of Daly City.

Mayor Smith appointed Councilmen O'Rourk, Sundermann and Bodien to collect funds for the San Mateo County Red Cross Chapter, to be forwarded to the hurricane sufferers. Donations can be made to either of the above, or to the Bank of Italy, Daly City branch.

A plan is proposed by the Council to remodel the front of the City Hall, and a drawing has been made of the proposed improvement. They feel that our City Hall should be an example to future builders. The design of Spanish type can be completed for a very reasonable amount, and would add greatly to the attractiveness of our city.

CLASS IN MISSIONS AT GRACE CHURCH

Africa? How much do you know about it? Do you know that it is the youngest member of the world's family? Do you know why? Do you know that when a great chief dies his servants are killed and buried with him? These and many other questions will be asked and answered at the class in Missions, held at Grace Presbyterian church.

Interesting stories have been prepared and actual kodak pictures will be shown of the people, lands and pagan ceremonies in Africa.

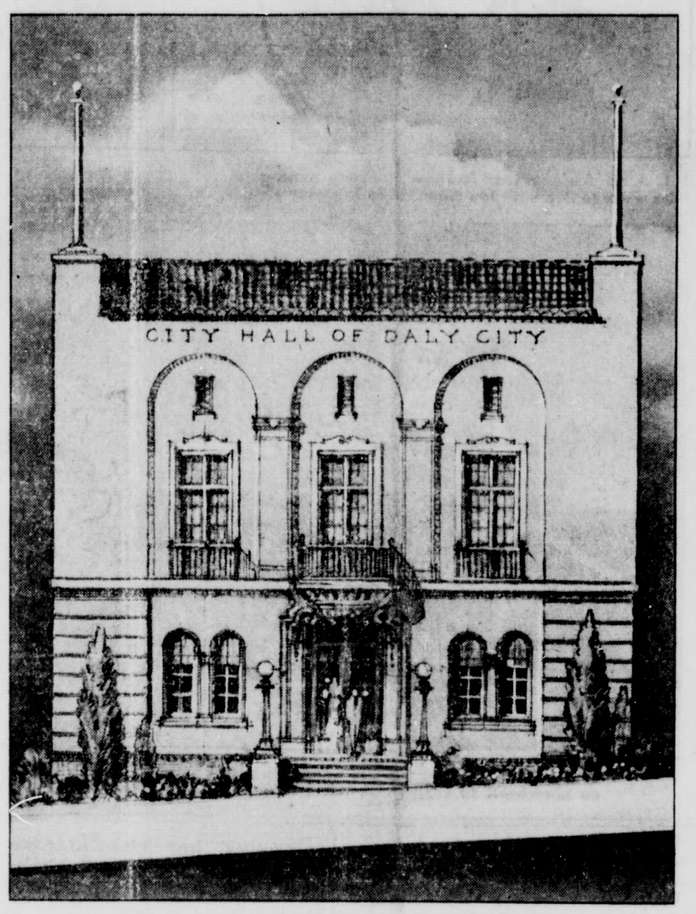
We know so little of this great, rich, ignorant, pagan land that is full of bubbling romance. But here is an opportunity to know more.

The Young Peoples' Christian Endeavor Society of Grace Presbyterian church, located at Hanover street and Evergreen avenue, have decided on an eight weeks study of Africa. From 7 until 7:30 p. m. each Sunday a chapter of Africa's history will be "The New Africa," by Donald read, discussed and illustrated. Fraser, is the text book to be used, and may be obtained for 60 cents from the Presbyterian Book Store.

All young people are most cordially invited and urged to attend these classes, which we are sure will prove interesting as well as beneficial.

Several members of the Crocker-Pershing P. T. A. and friends attended the whist party held last Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. H. C. Riley, of Market street, for the benefit of the Twin Peaks P. T. A. The guests from Daly City were Mrs. R. Hass, Mrs. E. H. Jordan, Mrs. W. Grantham, Mrs. Crooker, Mrs. L. Tompsett, Miss Cook, Mrs. Charles McKee, Miss Evelyn McKee, Mr. and Mrs. William Reiman, Mrs. J. Cosbie, Miss Margaret Hass and Charles McKee.

Improvements Proposed For the Daly City Hall



A plan has been proposed by the City Council to improve the City Hall. The above picture would indicate that the improvement would add materially to the appearance of the City Hall, it being taken from the plans for the proposed improvement. Should it finally be decided to make the improvement, the City Hall would be rearranged within, as well as externally, giving more room for offices, which are now crowded to the limit, it is claimed.

ENTERTAINS MEMBERS OF ROYAL NEIGHBORS

Mrs. Lillian Landini delightfully entertained the members of Vista Grande and Mission Circles of Royal Neighbors at her home on Winchester street last Tuesday evening.

The evening wsa pleasantly spent in playing whist, after which dainty refreshments were served. The table was prettily decorated in purple and white asters, which are the lodge colors. Mrs. Mary White acted as toast mistress and called on all the members present, who responded graciously.

WOUNDED GRID STAR WILL NOT PROSECUTE

Henry Henrioulle, football star and captain of last year's San Mateo high school team, who was shot in the leg by Edwin J. Cookesy last Monday night, during an altercation between the two, has declined to prosecute Cooksey, and so far as the county officials are concerned, the case is closed.

Cooksey was released on his own recognizance after Henrioulle's statement that he would not prosecute, and officials said that no action would be taken against him unless the boy or his relatives forced the issue.

Cooksey and his wife had been separated for two weeks. Monday night Cooksey visited her in an apartment at Beresford and a reconciliation was being reached, it is said, when Henrioulle arrived. There was a quarrel between the two. Finally Cooksey took his revolver from a bureau drawer, and when Henrioulle resumed his alleged threats, shot him through the leg. Then he surrendered himself to the police, while Henrioulle was taken to the hospital.

REGISTRATION CLOSES SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6

On Saturday, October 6, registration for the November election will close.

Anyone who has not registered this year, or who has moved since their registration this year, and wishing to vote at the November general election, must register before Saturday, October 6.

HAVE CHANCE TO AID HURRICANE VICTIMS

Citizens of Daly City who have not contributed to the fund for the relief of the sufferers from the terrible hurricane in the South, are urged to take or send their contributions to the Bank of Italy, Daly City branch, at once. Every cent contributed will be used for the relief of the people of the section visited by the hurricane. The American Red Cross is doing everything in its power to alleviate suffering, and urges that the people of this section be liberal in their contributions.

Cities of San Mateo county had contributed $1,235.75 on last Tuesday, it was reported from the office of Miss Helen Chesebrough, vice-chairman of the San Mateo County Chapter, Red Cross. The county quota is $4,000. Reports from the national organization, Red Cross, declare that there are 16,000 families in Florida and 400,000 persons in Porto Rico desperately in need of immediate help.

DALY CITY MEMBERS ATTEND DISTRICT P. T. A. MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of the Seventeenth District P. T. A. was held Friday, September 21, at Pescadero. A large number of members were present and many interesting subjects were discussed, which was of great benefit to all interested in P. T. A. work. Jefferson Union High P. T. A. was represented by Mrs. Putney, Mrs. Cliver and Mrs. McIsaac.

The speaker of the day was Mr. Frank Boren, superintendent of both San Mateo Junior College and Burlingame high school. Mr. Boren spoke on many interesting topics, particularly expressing the need of a better understanding of the school and child, also the opportunity the child has that attends a high school, saying that he gets more direct contact with the principal and teachers and also his classmates than can be had in a large city school.

Mr. Boren also spoke on the need of the finished product, or in other words finished boys and girls when they leave high school. He also mentioned the opportunities that the Junior College is furnishing the boys and girls that want a more finished education than the high school gives, and who cannot attend the universities. He also expressed his appreciation of what the P. T. A. is doing in the school, particularly in the high school.

Aged San Bruno Man Suicides

Joseph Jerling, a gardener, aged 69, was found dead, a suicide by poisoning, at his quarters at Uncle Tom's Cabin on the highway at San Bruno. Despondency due to ill health was the cause of his suicide. Traces of strychnine were found in a glass by his bed.

SOME ODDS AND ENDS OF THE WEEK'S NEWS

A six-inch shell, removed from the cruiser Milwaukee, wrecked near Eureka in 1917, exploded in a rubbish fire last Monday, bombarding the city with fragments of steel. The five-pound cap was hurled a half mile across the bay, burying itself in a mud flat. Fortunately no one was injured.

State and other aid in the construction of a bay bridge that will carry railway freight is asked by the Northern Federation of Civic Organizations, in a letter addressed to the San Francisco board of supervisors.

Russell St. Clair Beitzel has been sentenced to be hanged for the murder of his waitress sweetheart, Barbara Mauger, aged 19, whose body was found in a canyon above Hollywood several weeks ago.

Charging City Clerk Charles E. Barker of Pacific Grove with incompetence and discrimination in the matter of tax assessments, a suit has been filed by Miss Julia B. Platt, civic leader, with a view to ousting him from office.

Eight men are reported suffering from burns, while it is believed one man lost his life, in the fire in the Ridge Route section north of Los Angeles, which has now been brought under control.

Lawrence A. Taylor, well known chemical engineer of San Francisco, is dead from burns he received last Friday while perfecting a new process to reclaim used automobile oils.

Erna Janoschek, 17-year-old Oakland high school girl, and confessed slayer of Baby Thais Lilliencrantz, has been sentenced to serve from ten years to life in San Quentin prison.

Suddenly going mad, a pet shepherd dog attacked its owner, Jean McCartney, aged 14, of Red Bluff, but before the animal could bite her, the girl seized a 22 rifle and shot him in the head, stopping him dead in his tracks.

Sponsored by leading San Franciscans of every denomination, a campaign to finance a permanent convent and chapel for Carmelite nuns exiled from Mexico was formally launched at a luncheon meeting in San Francisco.

J. C. Lewis, who pleaded guilty to driving an automobile while intoxicated, was placed on probation for two years by Judge Van Zante at Hanford.

Declaring that rates charged for carrying box lumber on San Francisco's Hetch Hetchy railroad were reasonable, the Interstate Commerce Commission has dismissed a $50,000 complaint filed against this and other railroads.

No wonder every third person in California has an automobile. They're worth, on the average, $184 apiece. That estimate was announced yesterday by the State Board of Equalization, along with the statement that the average worth of cars has decreased $20 in the last year.

Remains of plant and animal life that existed in California more than a quarter million years ago have been discovered in the Bodega Creek district near San Antonio, Marin county, is is announced at the University of California.

Charles R. Koehn, 67-year-old prospector, has been found guilty of attempting to blow up the home of Superior Judge C. E. Beaumont, at Fresno, on May 17.

YOUTH MEETS DEATH IN AUTO COLLISION

Herbert M. Downs, of San Mateo, son of Henry M. Downs, San Mateo druggist, was killed Sunday night and two others injured when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by two other machines on the state highway near Baden, just south of Lawndale.

Miss Rhoda Schindler, of San Bruno, suffered a probable skull fracture, and Herbert Holliday, driver of the car, suffered severe cuts and bruises.

Henry E. Smith, of San Francisco, driver of the auto which crashed into the Holliday machine an instant before another car smashed into the rear of it, has been charged with manslaughter. The name of the driver of the car which was following the Holliday machine and crashed into it after it had been struck by the Smith auto has not been learned, it is said. Witnesses declared that Smith, driving north, was on the wrong side of the road when the crash occurred.

RECOUNT PETITIONS OF TWO CANDIDATES FAIL BEFORE COURT

A recount of votes in San Mateo county, asked by Joseph F. O'Malley, of Burlingame, who sought the Democratic nomination for state senator at the August primary, was denied last Monday morning by Judge George H. Buck, in the Superior Court at Redwood City, on the ground that the petition was filed in only one county, when it should have been filed in other counties comprising the district.

A dismissal of the second recount petition before the Superior Court, that filed by Frederick Peterson following his defeat by Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey, was asked late Monday by Ross & Ross, of San Mateo, attorneys for the Burlingame candidate. A recount of the vote up to Monday morning had failed to show any change in the first result, causing Peterson to withdraw his petition in favor of Hickey, incumbent supervisor from the First township.

O'Malley's petition charged county election officials with having carelessly thrown out 70 votes belonging to him, causing Senator M. B. Johnson of Montara, to win the nomination. However, Johnson lost the Republican nomination he sought, making it illegal for him to run as the Democratic choice.

As a result of Judge Buck's decision, George C. Cleveland of Watsonville is the only candidate left in the field at the November election for state senator from this district. It is understood O'Malley was advised to petition for a mandamus writ in the San Francisco District Court of Appeals.

NOTED AUTHOR DIES AT BERESFORD HOME

Samuel John Alexander, author of "The Inverted Torch," and well known California poet, died at his home in Beresford, last Monday, following a brief illness.

In addition to his volume of poems, published in 1912, Alexander had contributed regularly to magazines for many years. He was an established poet when he came to Beresford thirty years ago from his former home in Nashville, Tenn., and was considered among the great writers of the West. Alexander was the close friend of Edwin Markham, Joaquin Miller, Luther Burbank, Henry Mead Bland and other leaders in literary and cultural circles.

For years he had lived among the roses in his garden at the secluded Beresford home, contributing regularly to publications throughout America. He was beloved by all who knew him and leaves many friends to mourn his loss. Funeral services were held at Cypress Lawn chapel, Lanwndale.

Classes are held every Tuesday and Thursday evening from 7 until 9 o'clock at the high school building.

If prospective students already have some knowledge of the work, they may continue their study, or they may begin with the fundamentals of the subject if they have had no previous training.

The dinner which was scheduled for Tuesday, October 2, has been changed to Wednesday, October 3, at 6 p. m., owing to the fact that so many find the former date inconvenient. Charge as advertised, adults 50 cents and children under 12 years, 25 cents.

ORGANIZED LABOR FAVORS UNIFORM LAW ENFORCEMENT

The move to eliminate the present "double-headed" system of traffic control in California and substitute therefor a unified state force under the control of the Division of Motor Vehicles, will have the complete support of the organized labor groups of the state, according to news that comes from Sacramento.

This was indicated in the adoption of a resolution approving the proposal by the unanimous vote of delegates to the California State Federation of Labor. The Federation represents more than 100,000 organized craftsmen.

The endorsement of the Federation is considered by state officers to be one of the most important thus far secured for proposed legislation.

In adopting the resolution the Federation made but one stipulation, and that was to the effect that the officers should never be used for any purpose except for the enforcement of the traffic regulations. This principle is already embodied in the California Motor Vehicle Act.

The resolution recites that uniform enforcement is a vital need of California and can only be accomplished through centralized control of traffic officers.

The legislation the resolution endorses would eliminate the present system under which traffic officers are recommended by boards of supervisors but appointed and supervised by the state.

The primary weakness of this system is that dual authority is involved and the traffic officers are forced to attempt to work under two different political entities at the same time.

Resolutions endorsing this legislation had heretofore been adopted by the California League of Municipalities, California Supervisors Association, California Developement Association, Commonwealth Club and various other important public bodies.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS SHOW MORE ACTIVITY

Industry and trade in the Twelfth Federal Reserve district were seasonally more active during August than during July and were at levels above those of a year ago. In the industrial field, lumbering, copper mining and flour milling showed the largest increases in activity during the month and year. Sales at retail and at wholesale, and merchandise carloadings of freight were larger in volume during August than during July, and both sales and carloadings were larger than during August, 1927.

Employment conditions in the district are reported to have improved during August, as compared with July, 1928, and are better than in August, 1927.

The agricultural situation continues generally satisfactory except in some restricted areas where specialty crops predominate. It is estimated that aggregate production of the principal crops grown in the district during 1928 will be slightly less than a year ago. Prices for many farm products important in this district, such as livestock, citrus fruits, and most dried fruits, excepting raisins, are higher than a year ago. Higher prospective returns for these products are about offset, however, by the lower returns in prospect for wheat, potatoes, and certain other field crops.

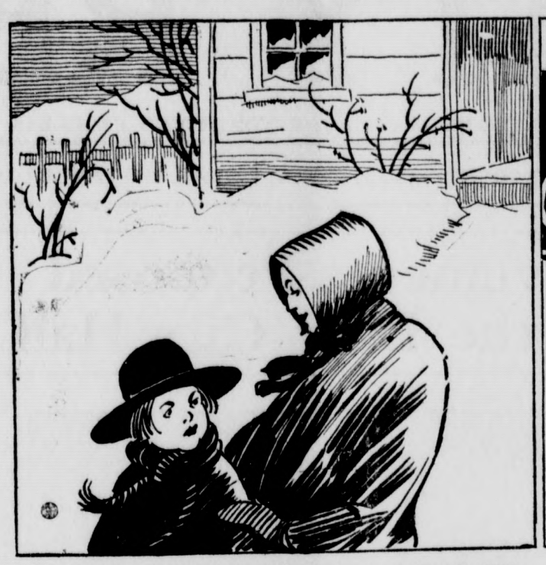
The amount of credit extended by member banks of the district has risen by a substantial amount since August 1, as a result of both seasonal and non-seasonal increases in commercial loans and loans on securities.

There is in this country 9,000 telephone companies and, in addition, over 40,000 rural lines which connect with other systems but which do not bear the designation of telephone companies.

Australia has a compulsory voting law. They should go a step farther and make 'em vote right.

PICTORIAL LIFE OF HERBERT HOOVER

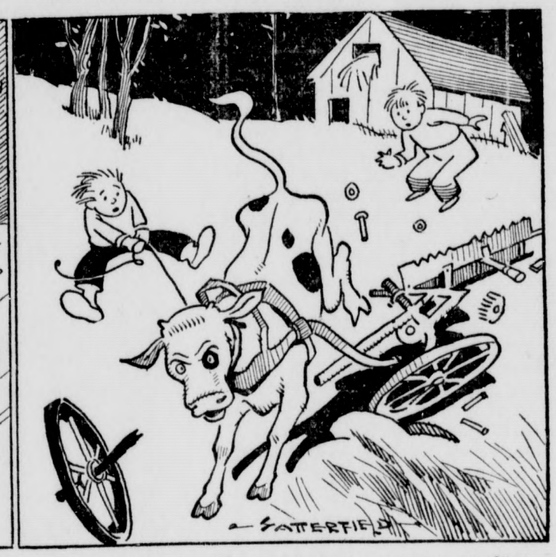
No. 5 By Satterfield



1. After the death of Herbert Hoover's mother in 1884, he went to live with his Aunt Millie in Cedar Rapids, Ia.

2. He was now ten years of age—old enough to assume an important share in all manner of farm work.

3. In winter Herbert and his cousin rode on horseback to school two miles away.



4. The future engineer constructed a mowing machine out of an old cross-cut saw, using a heifer for power.

SIDELIGHTS

President Coolidge has signified his intention to visit Havana again after his term as President expires. A good many Americans find that city attractive in certain respects, but that isn't why Mr. Coolidge is going.

Emil Herborg, a native of Denmark, left in his will $60,000 to aid astronomical and biological research. Twenty years ago he was a dish-washer in New York, later a teamster, contractor, and canned goods dealer. If that explains anything.

Bobbie Quigley, 3 years old, of Washington, smokes cigars. The matter was reported to a welfare board officials, who visited the Quigley home, found Bobby in robust health and decided not to interfere. Bobby approved the official's decision.

Captain Anton Heinen, German designer of the ill-fated dirigible Shenandoah, has become an American citizen, passing his immigrant's examination with a rating of 100 per cent. Among the requirements of the test are the ability to read and write.

Arabs around Damascus have been amused by American flapper tourists who desire to meet native shieks, and find them to be bewhiskered, fat, greasy old fellows with several wives and many children. The kind of sheiks the girls were looking for exist only in the movies.

Rev. Barend Kuiper has lost his job as professor in Calvin Theological Seminary of Grand Rapids because of his worldiness. He attended a movie show ten years ago and was warned not to do it again. Recently he fell from grace for the second time and was fired.

Last year California harvested 2,250,000 tons of grapes, which were shipped all over the United States, to Canada and Cuba. Immense quantities of the juice are reduced to a sort of jelly and shipped to consumers who add water to form a beverage. These customers are "warned" not to allow the stuff to ferment, as that would make it intoxicating.

Eastern junk dealers have adopted a code of ethics for the elimination of unfair business practices. They will probably refuse to deal in scrapped political platforms.

Stars of the Olympic swimming meet were Weismuller, Des Jardines, Miss Osipowich and Miss Garratti. In spite of their foreign sounding names, all are Americans.

In Budapest, Hungary, the parliament has before it a bill which would prevent women under 40 years of age from working in hotels, restaurants and cafes. But perhaps Hungarian flappers do not care for such jobs anyway.

The Interstate Commerce Commission gave certain railroads more pay for carrying the mails, making the new rates retroactive. Now the government has appealed from the Commission's decision and asks for a court review of the matter. It looks as though Uncle Sam will get into a lawsuit with himself.

Citizens of Wisconsin presented President Coolidge a 125-pound Swiss cheese in appreciation of his action in raising the tariff on that commodity two years ago. If he were a candidate someone would probably suggest that he was taking a rake-off.

If you would have a face free from wrinkles, take care of your feet, say the chiropodists. They claim that wrinkles are only the records of suffering from corns, bunions, fallen arches and ingrowing toe-nails. It used to be said that a woman's face is her fortune, but maybe it is really her feet.

John Squires of Brooklyn was twice denied admission to the Naval Academy on account of defective teeth, but has finally been admitted. It was probably decided that he would never get close enough to the enemy to bite 'em, anyway.

A penny isn't much; hardly worth picking up on the street, yet there are fortunes in penny sales. Last year one company operating penny slot machines vending chewing gum and candy took in three and a half billion pennies ($35,000,000) over $10,000,000 of which represented profit.

John R. Ragland of Washington is in trouble because he harbored a vicious goose. Mrs Amelia Facteau is suing him for injuries received when this "webfooted fowl of the goose species, with a mischievous, vicious, excitable and violent disposition and propensity" attacked her while she was returning home from church. She asks $10,000 damages.

When old John Wanamaker was a young man he promised a pious friend that he would never sell playing cards. To this day playing cards can not be bought in a Wanamaker store. But they sell poker chips and dice in any quantity.

John Magee, a New York capitalist, discovered that three false front teeth were missing when he sat down to breakfast. While searching for them he began to have sharp pains in his stomach. An X-ray photograph revealed that he had swallowed them, possibly in his sleep.

Testimony of eye-witnesses to a crime has again been found unreliable. James Sweeney, of New York was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment for complicity in a double murder and mail robbery, when two witnesses "identified" him as being one of the men they saw commit the crime. He has proved they were honestly mistaken and has been freed.

The New York telephone company has resumed telling the correct time when subscribers inquire, but now a nickel must be paid for the information. The first week the new system was in operation there were 77,160 requests for the time, for which $3,858 was paid. There should be a fine market in New York for a good, cheap watch.

FUND FOR VETERANS NEARLY EXHAUSTED

By January 1, 1929, the remainder of the $30,000,000 already made available by the voters of California for the farm and home loans to war veterans in this state will be exhausted, according to word received by the American Legion officials.

Approximately 1,500 wounded or disabled veterans have secured farms and homes through state aid and more than 4,000 able bodied veterans have also taken advantage of the farm and home loan act under the terms of which the veterans repay to the state over a period of years the entire sum of money with interest which has been loaned them.

The cost of farms on an average exceeded the cost of homes, according to figures furnished State Adjutant James K. Fisk of the American Legion by the California Veterans' Welfare Board. The average farm cost $5,458.00 while the homes averaged $4,706.00.

STATE LABOR FEDERATION ENDORSES PARK BOND ISSUE

Endorsing the program for a statewide system of outdoor play-grounds for the people, the California State Federation of Labor at its convention just adjourned at Sacremento passed a resolution favoring approval by the voters of Amendment 4. the State Park Bond Act. This measure, passed unanimously by the last legislature, provides for the ultimate issuance of $6,000,000 in State Park Bonds, but with the restriction that no dollar of State money can be expended until matched by another dollar from private gift or local sources. Thus for the expenditure of $6,000,000 the State of California will obtain $12,000,000 of parks and outdoor playgrounds for the people.

Redwood forests, ocean beaches, mountains lakes and rivers, historic landmarks and natural wonders in every county in the state have been suggested to the State Park Commission as possible units in the State Park System. A survey of the state is now being carried on to determine what areas are worthy of being included. One consideration that the commission will keep in mind is the necessity of access to the "great open spaces" on the part of the large populations in California's metropolitan centers.

In urging the passage of Amendment 4, the California State Parks Council points out that if distributed equally among the citizens of California for the period of the bond issue, these bonds would represent an average cost of four cents per person per year.

CLOSE BIG DEAL BY TELEPHONE

A big sugar deal, involving 300,000 tons of Cuban raw sugar valued at $17,000,000 was consummated recently by transatlantic radio telephone service between New York and London. This is the largest deal in sugar ever made in one day and was made by the Czarnikow-Rionda Company of New York, through their London office, for the Cuban Export Corporation to British refiners.

Desirable Rural Situations to End Movement From Farm to City

By DR. GEORGE H. THOMAS, Chicago.

IT IS said that on every country road is a boy beating his way to the city. That accounts for one of our rural problems. Agriculture is still America's biggest business, but a majority of Americans now live in cities. Contrary to popular opinion, the smallest rural communities grew in population during the last census decade. Our littlest communities—villages and towns up to 2,500 inhabitants—are not populating our cities. There is no generalization to explain the fact.

St. Andrew's church, Farm Ridge, in LaSalle county, is an example of means of fostering a desirable rural situation. Farm Ridge is not even a village. It is a community only in the sense that it has a center of religious and social life; no store, no post office, no town hall, no movie, no wayside barbecue.

One stands on the church land, a property two city blocks long; at one end is the church athletic field, at the other is the church cemetery, looking north, south, east and west over the fertile rolling prairie, he sees a farmhouse, the only one in sight, a mile away. Here lives the nearest parishioner.

St. Andrew's is self-supporting, but appearances belie every traditional feature of the "church near the home," which is the meaning of the word parish. On most any average occasion, the churchyard is packed with cars; the rectory lawn swarms with children from a few weeks old to boys and beautiful nonlipstick girls, in all years of the teens.

The fricasse one gets at the parish dinner is not cold storage chicken. After dinner, the church is packed for services and there are some outside who cannot get in.

This country church is a unique experiment station for solving a national rural problem. It has been a success, against handicaps. For it was established more than seventy-five years ago. One marker in the little cemetery in the churchyard bears the inscription: "Horace Beardsley, born Kent, Connecticut, 1782."

Possibility That Life Processes May Have Started by Pure Chance

By DR. D. W. SWANN, Philadelphia.

Science heretofore has always felt that everything that happened could be traced to some cause, which, in turn, always had a definite effect. But we now know that the results of many purely physical phenomena, such as the transmission of heat—depend upon what science inadequately calls "laws of probability"—which is just another name for chance or luck.

Either one accepts the view of creation handed down by the Bible, or else the scientist nods his head and says he cannot answer the question. Life processes may have started by pure chance.

As a matter of fact, even the subconscious belief prevalent among physicians that laws of chance as introduced into their own subject were merely makeshifts for something more fundamental, has, in the past year, received a severe blow.

For in the most modern development of atomic structure, the old idea of the universality and definiteness of the laws which control the actions of the most fundamental entity in all physics—the electron—have had to give way to laws of chance.

No longer do we say that if an electron finds itself in an electric field, a certain consequence will definitely follow. We say only that there is a probability that such and such will take place.

No longer do we rest in the belief that the velocity of an electron will remain constant so long as it is not under the influence of an electric field. It may suddenly change its state of motion. From being at rest, it may suddenly decide to move about like a dog tired of inaction.

All that this means to the layman is that science by chance may run into the secret of synthetic life—without now even knowing anything about its start. There is no telling how soon or how long before something may happen to open the volume to the right page.

Spirit of National Interdependence Great Need of the Present Century

By REV. C. EVERETT WAGNER, New York (Methodist).

The next document to be signed by the revolutionary rebels of all nations is a declaration of interdependence. The crying need for such a declaration in this Twentieth century is just as urgent as the one in 1775 for independence of small countries like the Thirteen Colonies. There was a time when the development of individualism should be stressed, but the world of 1776 is an entirely different world from that of 1928, and the demands of a worth-while civilization are also different. The inherent moral, spiritual, social, economic and political conditions under which we are now living demand that we shall work out in some successful way a scheme of living together in this old universe as a family of nations.

The intelligent people of America can no longer be like ostriches, sticking their heads in the sand whenever this question of our relationship to other nations is considered. To make effective this declaration of interdependence the revolutionary rebels of this age must stimulate a tremendous sympathy for the peoples of all countries. The words "stranger," "foreigner," "heathen" should be dropped from our vocabularies.

Criminal Youths of Country Recruited From Homes That Are Divided

By PERRY T. ALLEN, Springfield (Mo.) Attorney

The modern youthful criminal is not the product of poverty and want, but the result of unrestraint. They seek the thrills, look for some new experience that will offer a "kick" and do not falter at the most brutal and nauseating crimes. They are prideful of the notoriety given them because of it, and glory in their misdeeds as an accomplishment which places them above the other mortals.

Eighty per cent of the youthful criminals of the United States come from divided homes—homes that were broken up by divorce or abandonment. The others come from homes where the break exists, but where it is not shown publicly but known to the child.

To meet the world, coming generations must be prepared individually. Fire is necessary, but the child, to know that it will burn, need not be dragged through the flame. A child taught from the day it is born until it reaches the age of twelve years the meaning of discipline, the difference between right and wrong, and is given the correct example by his parents, knows no other course but the right.

LEGEND EXPLAINS A PETRIFIED FOREST

Navahos Call Stone Trees Bones of Monsters.

Tucson, Arizo.—The Navaho Indians of the southwest have a strange and fantastic legend to account for the great stone tree trunks whose broken columns strew the desert in the region of the famous petrified forest.

In the early days of the world, the Indians say, the sun did not ride tranquil and undimmed through the sky as he does now. At that time there was a black monster that was continually contesting his supremacy. His name was Yietso, and many were the battles that he and the sun fought.

Lived in a Cave.

This Yietso lived in a cave in the big mountains, and from there he would sally forth and contend with the sun. He had long and strongly muscled arms and powerfully clawed hands. And his bones were of stone. When he stood erect he could reach the sun at any place in the sky.

When he was defeated in his fights he would have to rest many days and often even many months before he was able to renew the attack, but he was never vanquished. Also at times during those terrible bouts he would get a finger, hand or limb so broken that he would have to discard it, but he possessed the power to grow a new part in the place of the disabled one. The bones of these disabled, discarded parts, which were of stone, he threw out from the cave over a ridge from time to time as they got in his way, and thus for years and ages the stone-wood accumulated.

At that time a boy by the name of Kee lived in a grass-tied feather home with his mother, Shemah, and his sister, Zonnie. One winter it got very cold. Finally, as they had no fuel, Kee went to the mountains for pitch wood. As the sun set before he reached the forest he slept out where he was. Then on the next day he went into the mountains and found what he supposed was pitch wood, a quantity of which he chopped.

Bones Instead of Wood.

When he reached his home it was growing dark the second night. So he slept outdoors in front of his hogan, where Zonnie found him still sleeping when she came home in the morning. She also noticed the wood, just as their grandmother came out of the house. And instead of pitch wood he had brought bones of Yietso; whereupon his grandmother scolded him and told him to throw the bones away.

In time Kee grew to be a great man. Time and again he visited the mountain where he had obtained the bone-wood, and there he prayed to his god and made sacrifice. Then one day he discovered the cave where the monster lived, and at the rising of the sun on the following morning he told him, through prayer, of the beast's abode.

Just as he was telling the sun the news he saw the great black thing leaping above the mountains to the attack. Quickly Kee called the men of his tribe together and they all prayed for the powers of good to aid the sun in this battle against darkness.

Right against the face of the sun leaped the monster. It stretched its fierce arms and clawing hands toward the sun's rim. Then the battle began in earnest. The sun attacked him with his millions and millions of rays, and, aided by the prayers of the then good people of earth, he finally overcame it.

In this battle of all battles the sun's rays pierced Yietso's body, and his blood, on reaching the earth, was congealed in lava flows. Finally he fell back to the earth dead, and the sun mounted triumphantly in the heavens, as he spread his invigorating and cheering light over land and sea. And the Plateau region is still incredibly covered with its bones, called by the Navahos Yietsobitsin, the bones of Yietso.

Trappers Dead Fifty Years Found in Cave

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.—A long-forgotten tragedy of the fur-trading days is believed to have been uncovered. A prospector reported that he had found two skeletons and a number of rusted old-fashioned muskets in a cave north of Bruce Mines.

The skeletons were lying by the side of a small, well-hidden lake and, until he found them, A. B. Frazer, the prospector believed he was the discoverer of the lake.

Frazer said he was positive no one had visited the lake since the men met their death. The muskets were of a type which has not been used in the North for fifty years. No other articles could be found to indicate when the men died or what caused their death.

Amputates Frozen Toes With a Kitchen Knife

Prince George, British Columbia.—A trapper who amputated four of his toes with a kitchen knife when they became frozen last winter has arrived here for professional surgical attention, but was told he had done the job so well no further treatment was needed.

While inspecting his trap line on the upper Finaly river, J. Omera suffered frost bite in his right foot. On returning to his cabin, which is 50 miles from the nearest neighbor, he took three days to perform the operation. He then washed the wounds in antiseptic and bound them up.

SURVIVOR TELLS OF SUBMARINE ESCAPES

Milwaukee Man Was in Four Disasters.

Milwaukee.—After having been in four submarine disasters in five years with the navy, C. H. Redding, twenty-eight, Milwaukee, is still very much alive. Throughout his navy service Redding was assigned to submarine duty as an electrician.

Redding was on the S-48 when it went down with an open hatch off Bridgeport, Conn., with 43 men on board, all of whom were rescued after fighting water and gas fumes for 12 hours. The thing that stands out in Redding's mind is the droll attempt of a machinist's mate to sweep back the ocean with a broom.

"The sub went down for a deep dive, but the hatch had been left open," he said. "Water poured in. This machinist mate was sweeping up water with a broom and was unaware of what had happened, as we all were for several minutes. He kept sweeping and sweeping but the water got too much for him. Finally he went into the control room and told the officers he needed a mop. We soon learned what had happened then."

When the R-6 sank in San Pedro (Calif.) harbor in 1922 after some one inadvertently had opened a torpedo door, Redding was just coming on board for the night.

As he stepped on the sub it began to sink and he stepped off into the ocean and swam to a tender lying alongside. Six men who were asleep were drowned but the others were rescued.

Redding had his head and face burned when a battery blew up on the S-37 in 1923. This accident also happened in San Pedro harbor. Six men were killed by the blast.

He was also on the L-5 which dove with an open hatch off the coast of California during the winter maneuvers in 1920. The crew of 22 men were rescued.

Lighthouse Built Amid Tempests on Coral Reef

Washington.—A successful end to an 18 months' campaign to plant a lighthouse on Tubbataha reef in the Philippine islands, marked by a bitter and ceaseless struggle against the elements, has been reported by the lighthouse service of the Department of Commerce.

A low coral reef set in the midst of a nest of rock shoals, sunbaked and hurricane-swept, has been crowned with a 120-foot tower to carry the light that will warn mariners. Presently the reef will be covered with soil behind the sea wall to make a tiny park under the tower.

Work began on the construction in November, 1926, and was stopped repeatedly by hurricanes which swept the barren, low islet. Many days the sun, beating on the white coral, made labor impossible during normal working hours.

Water had to be distilled out of the sea to supply the gangs struggling with the concrete and steel. Sickness forced retirement of a high percentage of the working force, but the erection of the light has been proven a necessity to safeguard the sea traffic between Manila and Hongkong and Australia, and the Philippine government kept its forces at the task.

Sea Serpent Has Sheep's Head on Body of Eel

Vancouver, B. C.—A nameless marine creature about six feet long, having an eel-like body and a head resembling that of a sheep, was on display at provincial police headquarters here as evidence of the existence of a "sea monster" which many people have reported seeing in Lake Okanogan, in the interior of British Columbia.

The strange creature was caught by the young son of Harry Alexander, Vancouver magistrate, while trolling on the lake.

Tales of the appearance of a monster in the lake have been coming from there for two years.

Most Moral Town

Linz, Austria.—This little town, capital of Upper Austria, claims to be the most moral and best governed in the world. Because of the lack of litigation, the law courts here have closed their doors, the police having reported no crimes or misdemeanors of any kind among the 50,000 inhabitants.

Kemalists Turn Backs on Traditional Hero

Constantinople—President Kemal, follower of Western cultural fashions, has bowled over the George Washington of old Turkey, Sultan Mahomet, conqueror of Constantinople in 1453.

An article in the official press, signed by a prominent Kemalist deputy, heaped insults on the national idol, charging that his only motto was "conquest and booty."

The attack on the Father of Turkey shows a fundamental change in the national mentality since the war. The author says that if Kemal had been on hand in 1453 instead of the great sultan the European renaissance would have sprung from Turkey instead of Greece and Rome.

HISTORY IS TAUGHT BY MUMMY FAMILY

Scientists Study Remains of Ancient Egyptians.

Detroit.—A family of Egyptian mummies 3,000 years dead are teaching history to a little group of studious Detroiters.

They are telling curious and amazing things about themselves and others of their kind, who walked the earth ten centuries before the beginning of the Christian era, relating strange facts, revealing long sought mysteries, bringing to life again a splendid civilization that vanished generations ago.

Dr. S. Edward Sanderson, Detroit physician, and Benjamin March, curator of Asiatic arts in the Detroit Museum of Art, have joined forces in the study of the mummies. Doctor Sanderson has called upon the X-ray to aid him in his search for further knowledge of these silent spokesmen of the past and March brings a complete and thorough knowledge of the artistic side of ancient Egypt, to aid in the undertaking.

Possibilities Endless.

This is an exceedingly novel and original experiment and both men insist that they have accomplished very little in spite of their intensive studies. Both believe, however, that the possibilities of the venture are endless, and express the hope that something of great value may some day come out of the undertaking.

"If we are to know and understand the men and women of the present, we must know something of those who lived in the past," Doctor Sanderson says. "If we took away all the knowledge we have acquired from our study of dead races and vanished peoples we would be very ignorant indeed.

"Egyptian mummies are especially interesting to study because Egypt was the great melting pot 3,000 years ago. We can prove this racially. The old Egyptian was a masterful man.

"Some of the mummies are so perfectly preserved that it is still possible to detect the presence of food in the stomachs of the children and to tell something of their diet. We find grains, an old form of millet and delicate bits of young mice."

Two passive bodies lie still and quiet upon the dissecting tables in the art museum but even in their silence and immobility they give up many secrets in response to the proddings of skilled scientific fingers, the searching eye of powerful X-ray machines.

Brain Tissues Removed.

March describes the procedure of an Egyptian burial. The embalming of the body so perfectly that today, after the lapse of centuries, the bones, the muscles and sometimes the skin are to be seen. The vital organs were removed and placed in four canopic jars, each guarded by its particular god and so placed that it would be easy for the whole body to reassemble itself when the time came to enter into a new life.

The X-ray has accomplished one thing of definite value. It has demonstrated the method by which the brain tissues were removed from the head without breaking the skull. Tiny borings through the nostrils are now believed to have freed the brain substances which were placed in their designated canopic jars.

It has long been assumed by many scientists that this was the method, but it needed the X-ray to reveal it in undisputed actuality. The X-ray plates which demonstrate this method will be loaned to the University of Michigan for class room study.

Holland Turning From Wind to Electricity

The Hague.—Electricity is playing a rapidly increasing part in the industrial life of Holland, as it is being found that, in spite of their picturesque character, windmills are falling very much behind in their output capacity. The capital for financing conversions from wind power to electrical power and for creating electrical power for other purposes is not always available and, therefore, an international finance corporation has been founded, with a capital of 10,030,000 florins, at Amsterdam.

The holders of this capital are Phoehl and Gutmann and Teizeira de Mattos of Amsterdam; Chase Securities corporation and Speyer & Company of New York; Dresden bank and Darmstadter and National bank of Berlin, and Hambros bank, London.

Activity will not be restricted to Holland, although the idea and the central organization have originated here, but will be spread wherever there is need of capital for electrical enterprises. It is possible that shares in electrical undertakings will be purchased, but the chief aim is to be able to supply loan capital of either a permanent or temporary character.

Howe's Hair Sold

Ticonderoga, N. Y.—A lock of hair, preserved as a memento of Lord Howe, who was killed near here, has been purchased by S. H. P. Pell and placed on exhibition in the museum of old Fort Ticonderoga. The lock was divided among the officers of Lord Howe's regiment, but was later collected by William Lupton, quartermaster of the regiment, from a descendant, of whom it was purchased by Pell.

Rocket Cars Coming

New York.—Rocket cars are being built in Germany for demonstration at Daytona Beach, Fla., next winter, and the inventor hopes to get a speed of 400 miles an hour.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

California has sent 77 lepers to the Federal Leprosarium at Carville, La., since the institution was opened in 1922, according to the State Department of Public Health. Nine have been sent this year.

Despite his note indicating suicide Percy F. Barnes, slayer of four men in a shooting orgy at Sacramento August 27, died in his county jail cell last week of heart attack, it was indicated following an autopsy. Dr. C. H. McDonnell, county autopsy surgeon, found no indications of poisoning, it was announced, but discovered that Barnes had been suffering from a serious heart condition which probably resulted in his sudden death.

Emergency forest fire conditions and a reputation of the disastrous man-caused brush and timber fires that have swept the State during the past few weeks may necessitate the closing of all national forests in California to public use and travel until the fall rains set in, according to S. B. Show, chief of the California District, United States Forest Service.

Butte County, is probably the first California city to arrest a pedestrian for carrying a "tail light." Joseph Marcel, Los Angeles county "hitch-hiker," according to word received, was temporarily detained for investigation because of his unusual highway equipment. Marcel carried a flighlight to hail passing motorists at night and also had a small "tail light" strapped on his pack as a signal to automobiles on the road behind him.

The California State Supreme Court at San Francisco, a few days ago, decided to consider at its Sacramento session on November 13th the appeal from the death sentence of six prisoners who were convicted for their participation in the Folsom Prison riot of last Thanksgiving Day. The men who wish to escape hanging are Anthony Brown, ringleader; Roy Stokes, Walter F. Burke, James H. Gregg, Albert M. Stewart and Eugene Crosby.

One man was seriously injured, several cars and their cargoes were reduced to splinters and a long stretch of Northwestern Pacific tracks was strewn with wreckage when a freight train crashed into the rear of another near Chiquita a few days ago. Possibility that several other men may be buried in the train's wreckage was expressed by the one known victim, Chris Dellas of San Francisco. Dellas said he and six other men had caught a ride on the forward train.

partment failed to protect unit buyers.

State aid was extended to 14,500 orphans and half orphans in California during the past fiscal year, Mrs. Ana L. Saylor, head of the State Department of Social Welfare, reports. More than 18,000 children were cared for in orphanages, day nurseries, preventoria, rescue homes, schools for defectives, boarding homes, homes for convalescents and child-placing agencies, Mrs. Saylor said. The total of 1500 orphan children were adopted during the twelve months.

Menaced by two blue automatics in the hands of a youthful masked bandit, fifty passengers on the San Francisco-bound Southern Pacific "Lark" one night last week disorged money and valuables worth nearly $1,000. The loot was dropped into a hat passed through the crowded club car of the train by one of the bandit's victims. Filling his pockets with the collected booty, the robber opened a vestibule door and leaped from the train as it pulled into Glendale at thirty miles an hour.

Fishing interests are planning to go before the next State legislature with a plan to extend the season on bass and salmon in the lower Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers two weeks. I. N. Hylen, secretary of the Sacramento Fishermen's Union, states that the plans for the longer season are due to the fact that river fishermen have made practically no catch this year. The season closed Saturday. The fishermen also will ask a law to prevent the spearing of salmon at up-river points during the spawning season. They claim that the spearing operations are reducing the run of salmon.

Apportionment of $16,841,233.48 of State funds to the public schools of California was announced a few days ago by William John Cooper, State superintendent of public instruction. This is the first of two allotments to be made during the current school term. The great bulk of the money—$15,249,252.02—goes to the elementary or grade schools. This apportionment is based upon $700 for each teacher unit, augmented by additional amounts to reimburse elementary school districts for educating physically handicapped children. The second apportionment, which will be announced in February, will be on the basis of $5.91 per unit of average daily attendance.

Completion of the study of possible means of financing California's gigantic plan of State-wide water conservation is expected by Edward Hyatt Jr., State engineer by October 1. The investigation is being made by Lester Ready, consulting engineer and formerly chief engineer of the state railroad commission with the office of the state engineer. Hyatt stated that the study will involve exhaustive investigation of five possible sources of revenue, ranging from absolute public ownership at private power distribution under State supervision.

WATCH YOUR MACHINE

Every prudent person who owns and operates a piece of machinery is careful to see that it is kept in good condition. This is generally done though frequent inspection to detect unusual wear and tear, so as to have the necessary repairs made before the machine actually breaks down.

The most important piece of machinery of all, however, is often sadly neglected. We refer to the human body, the machine upon which all joy of living depends.

It is well that people are more and more getting the habit of having periodical physical examinations, even though they be apparently in good health. By these examinations incipient disease may often be detected long before the person examined would have felt any discomfort from it. This is particularly true of diseases which attack the internal organs such as the heart, lungs, liver and kidneys.

Every person, especially those getting along toward middle age, should have a thorough physical examination at least once a year, whether they feel any symptoms of disease or not. If no disease can be found, it is a great satisfaction to know that one is sound physically, while a warning of disease in its first stages enables one to obtain treatment which may check its progress and materially prolong his life.

Many large life insurance companies now afford their policyholders free medical examinations once a year and this privilege should be taken advantage of by all means. If no insurance policy be carried, the fee for such an examination is small and may save much suffering and expense in the future. Watch your human machinery.

ROALD AMUNDSEN

Of all the heroes who have perished in the Arctic and Antarctic, Roald Amundsen was the most distinguished, and while the date and manner of his death may never be known, he will be remembered not only as a great explorer, but as one who died in an effort to rescue his fellow men, one of whom was a former enemy.

Amundsen's record is unique in that he discovered the South Pole and the magnetic pole, and also attained the North Pole. Having accomplished these feats of daring, he retired to his native Norway, at the age of 56, to spend the remainder of his life in quiet.

But the plight of Nobile, his companion of the Norge flight across the North Pole, with whom he had had a spirited controversy, roused the dauntless Amundsen, who immediately came from his seclusion to join in the search. While Nobile was rescued by others, Amundsen perished. At any event he has not been heard from, and a bit of wreckage from his plane, found weeks later, apparently leaves no doubt as to his tragic fate.

His record as a poler explorer can never be duplicated, so far as pioneering is concerned. He is the only one to reach three poles—North, South and magnetic—and although others may in future attain all three, Amundsen's priority will stand for all time.

The world mourns with Norway for the loss of her intrepid son.

Government executives are being urged to save two per cent of their appropriations. As a reward, they will naturally expect larger appropriations next year.

An exchange confides that "explosives are now being made from corn." And some of the liquid kind is almost as powerful as T. N. T.

FLYING TAXIS

Following closely upon the organization of a transcontinental airplane service comes the announcement of the proposed establishment of a "flying taxi" service, whereby passengers may engage planes for trips from one city to another.

The new enterprise is capitalized at $7,500,000, the financing of which is said to have been completed, and the first step to be taken will be the equipping of flying fields in twenty-five principal cities. Three schools for the advanced training of aviators are also to be established, probably one in the East, one in the Middle West, and the third on the Pacific Coast.

The idea of airplanes for hire is not new, such a service having been operated since 1910, but the present enterprise is on a much larger scale than any heretofore projected.

With greater stability and safety of airplanes being constantly developed, it is reasonable to expect that this form of passenger transport will be rapidly extended. The time is perhaps not far distant when a large percentage of all travel will be by air.

FAKE PRIZE SCEMES

A rather ancient scheme for separating the unwary from their money is being worked again, both in the United States and Canada, according to a leading business men's magazine. The plan is to insert an advertisement containing a perfectly simple puzzle which anyone can easily solve, and offer prizes for correct solutions. A favorite prize is a "building lot."

Of course, anyone who sends in a solution of the puzzle wins a lot, but he is informed that he will be expected to remit a small sum—in one case $7.75—for the deed and other incidental expenses connected with the transfer of the property. The "lot" is very small and the $7.75 fees alone would net the seller around $200 an acre for some worthless land.

So, if the "winner" swallows the bait, he is out just $7.75 for the privilege of working the puzzle, while his name is passed along to other swindlers as an easy mark.

TALENT FOR MUSIC

Through tests devised by psychologists, many interesting and useful facts have been discovered concerning the aptitude of a child for various pursuits. If the information developed by these tests be practically applied, much time otherwise devoted to training for activities for which the child is naturally unsuited may be saved.

It is now possible, according to Prof. Seashore of Iowa University, to positively determine the musical talent possessed by any child, even before he begins the study of music. The sense of pitch, time, consonance, intensity and others may each be determined with mathematical accuracy.

Practical experiments have been demonstrated that a person may have a high sense of pitch, with a poor sense of time, and so on. Only when all the elements of the musical mind are acute do we find real talent. When these purely musical elements are combined with a high general intelligence the foundation for an exceptional musician is found.

Contrary to the general belief, aptitude for music can not be developed by training. It must be inborn. A child with a poor sense of pitch at the age of eight will have a poor sense of pitch all his life, no matter how much he may study and practice. The same is true of the sense of time and rest. Training only develops that which is possessed at birth. A realization of these facts would save much useless torture for music students and those who must listen to them, if facilities for making the tests were available.

Prof. Seashore declares that no attempt should be made to force an unmusical child to learn music, as the result must be disappointing to all concerned. He says it is a tragedy to drive an unmusical boy to practice several hours a day on a violin, "while at the same time you may be ruining a perfectly good mechanic, or architect, or second baseman."

RURAL ELECTRIC LINES

Secretary Hoover in his speech accepting the nomination for the presidency referred to some of the indications of American progress, one of which was the fact that during the past eight years 9,000,000 more homes have been equipped with electricity.

Naturally most of these homes were in cities and towns, but during the past four or five years great strides have been made toward extending electricity to the rural districts as well.

In a majority of the states of the Union, as well as in many sections of Canada, a practical program of rural electrification is being worked out. This program is generally pursued through the co-operation of agricultural colleges, farmer organizations and electric companies, and no problem of the electrical industry is today receiving more attention than that of bringing electric service to the farms and farm homes.

While the resulting benefits have been general, they have perhaps meant most to those farm women whose daily burdens have been lightened through the introduction into their homes of electric light, heat and power.

HUNDRED BILLION FAGS

Of all the "movements" for supposed uplift which have utterly failed, the anti-cigarette crusade of a few years ago was perhaps the most conspicuous example. At present the only organization against cigarettes listed in the World Almanac is the Anti-Cigarette League of New York.

At the beginning of the present century cigarette smokers were comparatively rare, and persons who used tobacco in this form were not generally held in very high esteem. But the popularity of the "fag" or "coffin-nail," as the cigarette was sometimes called, grew rapidly from that time on, so that by 1915 more than 16 billion cigarettes were consumed in the United States yearly. The war appears to have given an impetus to cigarette smoking, and by 1920 the number used in a year had risen to more than 50 billion. Since that time the increase in consumption has been amazing, the number of cigarettes smoked during the fiscal year of 1928 being more than 100 billion.

Strange to say, the decrease in cigar smoking was not very marked during the years in which cigarettes showed a great increase. Some eight billion cigars were consumed in 1915, and in 1927 the number was was more than seven billion. In 1915 the amount of smoking and chewing tobacco used was slightly over 400 million pounds, while in 1927 it was 361 million pounds.

Argument over the effects of tobacco upon the human system has raged all these years, one side contending that is is seriously harmful, the other that is supposedly injurious effects have been grossly exaggerated. Even doctors disagree about it, and the American people do not appear to take warnings against cigarettes very seriously. Anyway, they are smoking more than 100 billion of them every year.

SINGERS TO PARTICIPATE IN THE RADIO AUDITION

Communities throughout Northern California are entering into the final stages of their selection of local winners to participate in the national radio audition. All local contests will be completed by October, 13.

One boy and one girl singer are chosen in each community.

The lucky ones thus chosen have a chance for national fame and fortune. They will go to San Francisco on October 22 to participate in the state contest which will be broadcast over the radio.

The state contest leads to the district contest and finally will come the national radio audition in New York City. The national radio audition, sponsored by the Atwater Kent Foundation, is to discover fresh young voices of genuine talent. Amateur singers between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five who have never had professional theatrical or operatic experience are eligible to compete.

Two California cities, Santa Rosa and Paso Robles, already have chosen their winners. Paso Robles selected Miss Helen Mae Cates, pretty young high school girl, and Wilfred York, recent graduate of the University of California, as its winners, Santa Rosa chose Miss Mollie O. Duckhorn, a private secretary, and Herbert Allen Farrar, Jr., a church soloist.

C. G. Swan, of Chicago, is not only honest but has a good memory. He recently sent a Polk street restaurant $2 for a 30 cent lunch he ate there thirty-six years ago and failed to pay for.

Three billion dollars in cash and securities were transferred from an old bank building to a new one in New York recently. The only precautions taken were the use of 18 steel, bullet-proof vault cars, each with five guards armed with machine guns and tear bombs, and a number of policemen along the route carrying sawed-off shotguns.

There is an extraordinary echo in the cathedral at Pisa, Italy. If you sing two notes there is no reverberation, but if you sing three they are taken up, swelled and prolonger into a beautiful harmony.

BELT ROAD REPORTED PURCHASED BY S. P.

According to a story appearing in the Burlingame Advance, the Southern Pacific has acquired, or is about to acquire, the South San Francisco Belt Line Railroad.

The South San Francisco Belt Line railroad is a minute railroad, as railroads go, but with the Western Pacific railroad entering the territory in the vicinity of South San Francisco, it assumes an important role in the railway situation in San Mateo county and that important industrial and cattle center in the northern part of the county.

This railroad, for many years privately owned, runs from South San Francisco to the water front past the plants of the Metal Thermit corporation, several packing plants and a steel mill. It connects with a wharf and water front facilities. This road also connects with the main line tracks of the Southern Pacific. Altogether there are about five miles of track.

With the Western Pacific entering the field, this short road becomes of importance, as the tracks connect with potential business, water front and a desirable territory.

BOLD BANDIT ROBS UNION OIL STATION

As Ed Jones, attendant at the Union Oil Campany station on the highway near Uncle Tom's Cabin, was counting his cash early Sunday morning, a holdup man appeared. Pointing a pistol at Jones, the robber demanded the cash, amounting to $190. Hurriedly grabbing up the money, the highwayman ran out of the door and jumped into a roadster, the engine of which he had left running, and headed toward San Francisco.

The bandit is believed to have been the same one who has made a number of hauls from gas stations in San Mateo county during the past few months.

There will be two splendid features on Tuesday, October 2, Patsy Ruth Miller and Ralph Ince in "Shanghaied," and Esther Ralston in "Spotlight."

That intensely interesting picture, "Burning Daylight," will be at the State for two days, Wednesday and Thursday, October 3 and 4, with Milton Sills and Doris Kenyon having the leading roles.

On Friday, October 5, patrons of the State will have an opportunity to see Adolphe Menjou and Evelyn Brent in "His Tiger Lady." Eddie's Adver-show is also presented on Friday.

What is thought to be the world's largest tortoise was received at the London Zoo recently. It weighs about 300 pounds, is 3 feet 6 inches long and is nearly 100 years old.

"STATE STREET SADIE" IS COMING TO THE EMBASSY

The closing days of "The Terror" at the Embassy Theatre have been announced with the booking of "State Street Sadie" as the succeeding attraction. The all talking mystery film, the first of its kind, has been one of the most successful pictures yet shown on the Vitaphone and one which has created widespread comment because of its sundry novelties.

Adapted originally from an English play, "The Terror" had never before been performed in this country. The Warner Brothers purchased the rights to this entertainment while in Europe and outbid New York theatrical managers as well. The production of this work on the Vitaphone is the most complete development yet shown in talking pictures.

THE RETURN of ANTHONY TRENT

By WYNDHAM MARTYN

Copyright by Barse & Hopkins WNU Service

The manner of delivering the third warning arranged itself with the ease Trent had come to associate with this campaign against the Grants.

One evening after dinner Kathryn Holland had complained of a headache, and he had taken her for a spin among the Lakewood pines. As the ironwork gates to the house were always closed, Trent got out of the machine at the curb on his return and opened them. While he was doing this a stranger passed and asked him in what direction Ahnelt hall was.

"I thought it was a holdup," said Kathryn Holland gaily. "What did he want?"

She saw that her escort was looking curiously at an envelope he held.

"His excuse was that he wanted to know where Ahnelt hall lay, but I think the real reason was to get me to give this letter to Grant. I wonder why he couldn't deliver it himself."

When he had put his car in the garage and joined the rest in the ballroom, Trent saw Grant from a doorway, beckoning him. Grant was looking wretched.

"Kathryn Holland says some one gave you a letter for me."

Anthony Trent put it into his trembling hands. Grant did not even thank him. Furtively he took it and disappeared.

In the library, where he could be sure of being alone and yet within the comforting sound of human voices, Payson Grant read the letter. It was Sutton's writing, as he had feared.

"You escaped that time through the unconscious intervention of one of your friends. But for that you would now be on your way to Buenos Aires in La Belle Alliance. If you doubt it, bring up the matter in court. I shall see you on the seventeenth. You have one way of escape, and that is full confession.

"F. W. S."

It was Albert Thorpe who informed Anthony Trent that Mr. Grant was overcome by the sultriness of the weather and had fainted in the library. Mr. Grant would like to see Mr. Trent, if possible, for a few minutes.

"I'll go up at once," said the obliging Trent.

"It's about that letter," Grant said. "I can't quite make it out," he confessed. "I suppose you didn't get a good look at the man's face?"

"I saw it quite distinctly," Trent answered readily.

Grant looked troubled.

"That's funny," he murmured "Kathryn said she couldn't recognize him at all; she only saw he was a big man."

"Miss Holland was in the machine, and could not see him. I saw him clearly because he was in the circle of light made by the lamp on the top of the gate-post. Anything wrong about the note? Black-hand threats, or anything like that?"

Grant shook his head and tried to smile.

"Nothing more than curiosity," he answered. After a pause, as though nerving himself for a shock, he asked what the stranger looked like.

"He was a man a little taller than you and a good bit broader in build. Rather a pale face. Sort of broken nose and sharp little gray eyes. I noticed he had a V-shaped scar over his left eye. Gave me the impression," Trent went on confidentially, "of being mentally unbalanced. Looked as if he needed a good square meal and a hair cut."

Through a mirror Trent watched the changes fear brought to the other's face. That Grant suffered pleased him; but that Grant's heart might be weak made him vaguely uneasy. There would be greater strains than this to bear.

"Did you recognize the man?" Trent asked.

"I wanted to see if I did," Grant said evasively. "It was a begging letter, and the police oughtn't to let people be annoyed like that. What's the date today?"

"The fourteenth," said Trent. "Anything I can do for you?"

"You might send Thorpe in."

When Thorpe came in his employer stared at him sullenly. "Do you still have the grounds searched every night?" he snapped.

"Yes, sir," Thorpe answered. "Also the house from basement to roof."

"You're too d—d careless to suit me," Grant grumbled. "See you take special care tonight. Send Mrs. Grant here at once, and get this number on the long distance."

Natica came in almost at once. All she knew was that a letter had been given either to Kathryn Holland or Mr. Trent and on receipt of it her husband disappeared.

She read it slowly. It was Frank's writing, and he was near them. Try as she might, she could not fight off a feeling, as yet vague and nebulous that events were at hand which threatened the fabric of her dreams.

"Of course, you must call the police," she said, "or I will."

"I've had enough of this place," Grant said. "Every man I look at I want to be sure isn't Frank in disguise. My God! Nat, what use are the police if they can't catch him? He was within two hundred yards of me a few hours ago, and may be nearer than that now." He looked about the big room apprehensively. "I'm through. Think of what an escape I had! That d—d ship was got just to kidnap me. I tell you Frank must have money at the back of him. The police go looking for a seedy, broken-down tramp when he's probably living as well as we are and driving down here in a limousine."

"Don't make any plans until tomorrow," she said. "If it will make you any easier, change your room tonight."

Not because she had sympathy for his malaise, but because she was not sure how unwisely he might speak to the police, Natica saw the authorities when they came. They had combed the neighborhood and found no vagrants whom they did not know.

This confirmed Grant in his new belief that Sutton was not an outcast, but one protected, and therefore doubly dangerous. Because Trent had saved him from a deadly peril he felt a certain sense of safety in being near him. Trent was one of those reckless fools who liked dangers. If danger came near to Grant he might rely upon his guest to repel it.

He was talking to Trent when a footman brought a telegram toward them. Grant shrank back, as though here were another message from the man he had wronged. It was a relief when Trent opened it.

"It's from Swithin Weld," he announced. "Wants me to go up and spend a week or so in his Adirondack camp. I suppose you'd be bored to death at it."

Payson Grant turned a reproachful look on the speaker. Bored to death in such surroundings! He could imagine what it was like. Not a stranger could get past the keepers and guides. One might be as truly secluded there as any place in the world.

"Today's the fifteenth," he heard Trent say. "I think I'll start tomorrow. My visit is up. I've had a very pleasant time here, Mr. Grant. I wish you weren't looking so out of sorts."

Tomorrow was the sixteenth. A sentence of Sutton's note was graven on his brain. "I shall see you on the seventeenth." There would be no Anthony Trent to rely on then.

"You are lucky in having real friends," Grant said bitterly. "I've got to stay here whether I like it or not. I tell you, Trent, I'm a very sick man. It doesn't mean very much to you, a trip to the Weld camp. An invitation like that to me would mean saving my reason."

Trent simulated growing astonishment.

"You really mean it?" he asked. "I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll ask Weld if I may bring you along, too. But could you leave?" he added doubtfully.

"There's nothing to stop me."

Before dusk the wire came back as scheduled.

"By all means bring Grant (it read), but he will find it deadly dull here as there are no other guests.

"SWITHIN WELD."

Natica Grant was even more pleased than her husband, although for vastly different reasons. She could imagine the joy of telling those who asked where her husband had gone that he was staying at the famous Weld camp in the Adirondacks. Payson would have the opportunity to get to know his host thoroughly.

It pleased Grant to think he was stealing a march on his enemy. "You'll see me on the seventeenth," he muttered. "All right, I'm leaving on the sixteenth." He was in excellent spirits at dinner.

Grant had no fear that his wife would suffer at Sutton's hands. He did not think anyone could frighten Natica. Supreme selfishness dwarfed all her other emotions.

He learned from Trent that the week might lengthen into two if the weather kept fine. In two weeks' time Payson Grant would come back a different man, he assured his wife. Just now he was shot to bits with worry and unwise indulgence in stimulants. And every day brought Sutton's ultimate capture nearer.

"I've never been in the Adirondacks," he confessed to Trent. "This is going to be a revelation to me."

"It wouldn't surprise me at all," Anthony Trent agreed.

CHAPTER XII

The Murder in the Forest.

Weld met them at Elizabethtown and drove them up the long trail to the camp. Payson Grant had never felt more wholly at his ease. Remote from cities, staying in the center of a vast acreage long held by a trespass-hating landowner, he was conscious as he had never been at Deal Beach of immunity from danger.

At night there were no servants in the camp. There was a smaller building for them a quarter-mile distant and connected by telephone. The discovery rather alarmed him. In effect it meant that his room, which was on one end of the building, left him far removed from those of the two men at the other.

He began to hint at possible dangers from robbers attracted by the booty to be obtained in such a place as this.

"Not a chance of it," Weld declared.

Trent's contribution to the subject was not reassuring.

"That's because nobody has ever wanted to get in here badly enough to set about it skillfully. If I were anxious to get in here to murder, let's say, I'll swear it would be easy. To begin with, a camp like this would be a cinch. You or I, Weld, could climb up these rough walls and get in any window we wanted."

"You're frightening Mr. Grant," Weld remarked.

"Not I. He's used to things like that after having a burglar with him for a week. I don't suppose anyone is likely to come here, for the reason we are not marked cu. for vengeance. If Grant were a defaulting banker like the man in 'The Pavilion on the Links,' there might be a chance of some fun."

"Fun!" Great cried testily. "I'm d—d if I get your sense of humor. The idea of being marked down by any criminal isn't a funny as you think."

He was conscious that his irritation was incomprehensible to men ignorant of the fears their idle chatter engendered. He sought to appear at ease.

"I'm afraid I shall have to disappoint you," he returned. "I've no more thrilling story than trusting a criminal for a week and thinking he was a detective. That makes me a bit sore of crooks."

Cartoon in Japan Not Inspired by Politics

In Japan, apparently, the cartoon did not have the democratic beginnings of its occidental counterpart. Here in America the cartoon was originally used in magazines and newspapers as a political weapon, but the Japanese cartoon was more than eight hundred years old before the first issue of the Yokohama Mainichi Shimbun, first of the Japanese dailies, appeared in 1871.

The first Nipponese cartoonist was a lordly person, a Buddhist monk, Kakuyu, abbot of Toba, who was born in 1053 A. D. He employed most of his eighty-seven years laughing at the follies and vanities of the decadent Kyoto court and at pretentious lowbrows everywhere. His influence over that branch of Japanese art was as great as that of Shakespeare on the English drama. In fact, for centuries the only Japanese name for the cartoon was "Toba-e"—"Toba Pictures." No cartoons appeared in Japanese newspapers until a few years ago, but now they have become so popular that in all the large cities they are printed as daily features.

Beauty of Single Column

For thousands of years the world's famous architects and designers have found nothing so beautiful and worthy in building as the simple, classical column. The beauty of these fluted columns has been made available for use on every kind of structure, from the modest cottage to large public buildings, by the principle of pressed steel column construction.

SPECIAL DISHES

Those who enjoy the gamy flavor of the wild duck will like a dish of:

Duck en Casserole.—There may still be a few who have not dressed wild birds who do not know that they can be clean and well picked in a few minutes by taking off as much of the down and coarser feathers, then dipping in hot paraffin, hang up and let get perfectly cold. The feathers, pinfeathers and all will peel off like a glove from the hand.

Wash and dress the birds well and if the gamy taste is not liked, parboil in water to which a tablespoonful of vinegar has been added. Drain, stuff with celery—a few stalks laid into the cavity of the bird, brown in a little butter, then place in a casserole with carrots, potatoes, small onions and enough moisture to steam and cook. Bake in a hot oven until all are well done. Serve the duck from the casserole. Remove the celery before serving. Some prefer an onion baked in the duck, or both. Season well as the birds are put into the casserole.

It is often a great help to have a recipe for an occasion which will serve a large number. Here is a punch which serves seventy-five:

Fruit Punch.—To three quarts of water add seven pounds of sugar and stir until dissolved. Boil gently for ten minutes. When cool add the juice of twenty oranges, twenty-four lemons, the juice and chopped pulp of a pineapple or a can of grated pineapple, two quarts of cold tea, one quart of water in which two bunches of mint have been steeped after being chopped, then strained; one cupful of water in which one tablespoonful of cloves have been simmered twenty minutes and strained, and lastly one quart of carbonated water and a quart of ginger ale. Serve in a punch bowl with ice, slices of fruit and maraschino cherries.

Favorite Dishes.

With little thought and planning, almost any of our common foods may be changed into something unusual and appetizing.

Did you ever try a baked apple salad? For those who are not able to digest the queen of fruits uncooked, this is a simple and delicious salad. Add a few dates, a few nuts a bit of celery and such dressing as the following:

Boiled Salad Dressing.—Beat the yolks of seven eggs until thick, drop three tablespoonfuls of good olive oil slowly, beating all the time, then add one-half cupful of melted butter and continue beating; now add one-half cupful of mild vinegar, and the juice of one lemon, slowly. Cook in a double boiler until the mixture coats the spoon. Remove from the heat and sift in the following ingredients which have been well blended: One and one-half tablespoonfuls of mustard, one-half teaspoonful of white pepper, one-eighth teaspoonful of cayenne pepper, three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Mix well and when using the dressing add plenty of whipped cream.

Beet Salad.—This is a salad which is especially attractive in appearance. Cook small, even sized beets until tender, dice and add a cupful more or less of pecan meats broken into small pieces, add the above salad dressing which has been tinted a light pink using the beet liquor. Marinate several hours in a French dressing before adding the heavy dressing, and the salad will be more tasty.

Pear Salad.—Cook ripe pears until tender in a sugar sirup; arrange two halves of fresh lettuce and decorate with quartered blanched almonds, pushing the sharp point into the pears. Heap a spoonful of golden mayonnaise on the side of the lettuce and serve.

Pomona Jelly.—Soak one-half a box of gelatin in one-half cupful of cold water. Dissolve in one cupful of boiling water. Add two cupfuls of sweet cider, sweeten to taste, and add a tablespoonful of ginger sirup, strain and mold. Serve with roast pork.

Apple and Cabbage Salad.—Shred purple cabbage very fine, mix with finely sliced and shredded apple, add a small portion of finely cut celery, a good dressing with a bit of onion juice if desired. Season and serve well chilled.

French dressing: Take one-half teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of powdered sugar, a dash of cayenne, three tablespoonfuls of olive oil and one of vinegar. Beat well before using.

Cork Leg Saves Vet in Ocean Death Leap

Philadelphia.—How a cork leg kept Bruce McQuillen, forty three, a World war veteran, afloat after an alleged suicide leap in midocean from the Cunard liner Samaria was learned by friends of McQuillen and his father, Dr. Daniel Neall McQuillen, Philadelphia dentist.

McQuillen, who was on his way to Europe with his father and some friends, was rescued when a boat was lowered from the liner. Later he slashed his wrists, and because of his condition the party abandoned the proposed European tour and remained aboard the Samaria for the return voyage.

According to Doctor McQuillen, his son has been despondent because of his wounds.

BOY GETS FIRST CHANCE TO PLAY

Taken From Father Who Kept Him Prisoner.

Memphis, Tenn.—Woodrow Wilson, eleven, experienced more thrills in one afternoon than most people do in a year.

For the first time in his life he went swimming, saw a circus, visited a park and the zoo, and saw his first snake, elephant, a deer, a bear and other animals. All in one glorious afternoon.

Woodrow is a healthy, robust youngster for his age, and has the mentality of the average boy of sixteen. He is normal in every way and always has been.

Yet since he was a baby he has watched other children play from the window of his home where he was held captive by his father, J. H. Wilson, seventy-four years old.

His mother died when he was a baby and his aged father had kept him closed up in their home, except for school hours, and he was escorted to and from school directly. He was never allowed to go out and play with other boys and girls.

Recently he broke a rule of his father's by going out into the yard to play. Neighbors complained to police that Wilson beat the child with his fists.

Woodrow was brought into Juvenile court and taken from the custody of his father. Now almost every civic organization in Memphis is vying for the opportunity to "show him the town."

Frogs Keep Starving Gold Searcher Alive

The Pas, Man.,—After being lost for 48 days in the North country and living on frogs and dead fish, Andy Taylor, prospector, came back to civilization—in rags and so weak from starvation that he could hardly walk.

He came back in an airplane and with him his friend, Fred Coleman, Ontario prospector, who refused to believe he was dead, stayed on the ground and kept up the search long after everybody else had quit, and finally found him.

The plane was piloted by Captain Kenyon, Western Airways pilot, who flew to Burntwood to get them.

When Coleman found him, Taylor was at the point of giving up the fight. His shoes were worn out, and he had wrapped pieces of his tattered clothing about his bleeding feet. For days, he said, he had been able to walk only about 50 or 100 feet before falling down exhausted. A seven weeks' beard covered his pale, gaunt face.

He was tottering aimlessly along through the brush when Coleman, who had followed every clew and stuck to the trail, found him.

Taylor was too weak to talk much but—he could grin.

Fears New Gas Stove, Commits Suicide by It

New Orleans.—An obsessing fear that the jets of a new gas stove installed in his home would some day be left open and the family killed, drove Mike Stemp, fifty-six, to take his own life, by the very means he feared.

For two weeks the idea had haunted him, and he repeatedly warned his wife to take strict care to turn off the stove. He even had his bed removed to the farthest corner of the house to be away from it.

One night he awoke in a fright and declared the stove was leaking. The jets were found safely closed.

The next night his wife and two daughters, Florence, eleven, and Esther, fifteen, left him alone in the house. They returned to find him slumped over the open jets of the stove, dead, in the gas-filled house.

Uneasy Arabia

©National Geographic Society

An Oasis in Kingdom of Hedjaz.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

ARABIA has become the scene of one of the world's latest threats of war. In the past few years the desert Bedouins, under the leadership of the sultan of Nejd, have gained control of all central Arabia, as well as Mecca with its state of Hedjaz, Asir, and large areas of eastern and southern Arabia. Now they are threatening to push their operations northward into Iraq and northwestward into Trans-Jordan. The seriousness of the latter threats lies in the fact that Iraq and Trans-Jordan are both mandates of Great Britain. Between them lies Syria, a mandate of France.

Arabia has been figuring in world affairs since the curtain rose on the first act in history, and yet it has large areas about which we know practically nothing. Because of the huge bulk of Asia, its numerous peninsulas are somewhat dwarfed, and one may fall into the error of classing Arabia with peninsulas nearer home, such as Florida. But 60 Floridas would be lost in this great Asian projection; it is, in fact, a third as large as the entire United States.

Tremendous desert wastes are not alone responsible for the fact that the outside world is ignorant of the Nejd in the heart of Arabia. That country—if the area over which the Nejdian nomads roam may be called a country—has one of the most effective exclusion laws known: the exclusion law of the sword. These people do not care to go into the outside world, and they want no visits from Western traders, diplomats, military experts, or missionaries — especially missionaries. They are blood-thirsty fanatics on the subject of religious simplicity. As Wahabis they are perhaps better known to the world than as Nejdians, for the former name they owe to their religious associations.

Blue laws have never taken on so deep a tinge of blue as in the land of the Wahabis. To drink or even to smoke tobacco is not merely a dereliction in their strict code; it is a capital offense. It is equally an offense, according to their views, to use rich rugs and fine vessels in mosques, and they have made more than one effort to invade Mecca itself to reduce the holy places there to Wahabi simplicity. They even look upon other Mohammedans not of their sect as unbelievers unworthy of life.

Their Capital a Forbidden City.

The capital of the Nejd, Riad, where was born the movement that threatens to embrace all Arabia, has been more truly a forbidden city than Lhasa. The only Westerner known to have visited it in recent years was an American physician, smuggled in that he might save the life of a chieftain, and it is believed that even this errand of mercy would not have saved him from summary execution save for a little group of defenders who for a brief time stretched their standards.

After the World war Great Britain paid the ruler of the Nejd a huge subsidy—$400,000 a year, an "honorarium" four times as great as the salary and allowance of the President of the United States. The young sultan took the cash and let his followers go about their forays pretty much as they wished, with the result that Great Britain had to spend much more than the subsidy defending the kings of Hedjaz, Trans-Jordan and Iraq against incursions.

Since the sultan of Nejd became king of Hedjaz and ruler of most of Arabia, the movement has been much too great for a subsidy to affect, and now Great Britain has found it necessary to mobilize armored cars and airplanes at the head of the Persian gulf to protect Iraq.

Ibn Saud, the sultan of Nejd and king of Hedjaz, has combined his political and military drive for a unified Arabia with a revival of Wahabism. The Wahabi sect was founded early in the Eighteenth century by Abd el Wahab, who might be termed the Cartwright of Mohammedanism, for he was essentially a Moslem Puritan seeking to turn his faith back to what he considered its simple fundamentals. Feeling that Mohammedanism should be uncompromisingly monotheistic, he was particularly disturbed by the tendency to worship Mohammed, who claimed to be only a mortal, as well as Allah. He also found his co-religionists invoking Moslem saints and preached against this practice. After Wahab died his fanatical converts wrecked the elaborate tomb of Moslem teachers and even went so far as to try unsuccessfully to destroy the dome over the tomb of Mohammed at Medina.

Before his death Wahab converted to his simplified faith a powerful sheik of central Arabia, Mohammed Ibn Saoud. He became both the religious and political head of Wahabism; and he, too, took a leaf from the fundamental teachings of Mohammed and began spreading his faith by the sword.

Iraq, one of the areas threatened, is the modern name for the traditional Garden of Eden historically known as Mesopotamia. The cradle of civilization, in the belief of many archeologists and historians, is this very valley of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers.

Iraq and Its King.

Iraq lies between the Arabian desert on one side and the Persian uplands on the other. West lies the French Mandate of Syria; north the Kurdish highlands of Turkey. The Persian gulf forms a corridor 1,000 miles giving Iraq a waterway to the open Indian ocean. Dates from "the Garden" come to New York by way of this corridor. Within Iraq live 3,000,000 people, a slim population for soil which once supported more people per acre than does densely populated Belgium.

Great Britain has made her Mesopotamian mandate the Arab Kingdom of Iraq ruled by a Mohammedan prince, the son of the former king of Hedjaz. King Feisal reigns where Babylonians, Assyrians, Chaldeans, Persians, Greeks, Romans and Saracens ruled successively for six centuries.

Of the three principal cities, Mosul, the oil town, seems safely beyond reach of the Bedouins. Bagdad, in the center of the valley, comes by its position of capital honestly. Basra, in the Far South, is the end of what was to have been the Berlin-Bagdad railway.

The sultan of Nejd seems to be causing history to repeat itself. Time after time city ways have softened city conquerors until a new barbaric horde swept over them. City Arabs have taken readily to civilization's ways. They work in ice and cotton cloth factories; upon public works and engineering projects.

Much agricultural land has been reclaimed by irrigation in an effort to revive the luxuriant Garden of Eden. Dates from the date palm are the chief product. Wheat, barley and rice are also grown. Experiments looking toward cotton growing have been promoted. Vegetables and flowers thrive in the protecting shade of palm fronds.

Trans-Jordan Full of Nomads.

Trans-Jordan, the other threatened region, lies in the northwestern corner of Arabia adjoining Palestine. Perhaps it will bring the newly independent but very old country closer to realize that its capital, now Amman, was once Philadelphia—the great-great-great-grandfather of the half dozen or more Philadelphias, great and small, that are to be found in our postal guides. But it was only a mere matter of twenty-odd centuries ago that the city took the name Philadelphia from its new lord, Ptolemy Philadelphus. It had existed as Rabbath Amman, chief city of the Ammonites, almost from the days of Lot, from whom the Ammonites are said to have sprung. It was after a victorious battle with these same people of Amman that Jephthah, according to the Biblical story, returned to the fatal meeting with his daughter.

When Trans-Jordan is described as stretching from the Jordan and the Dead sea toward the interior of Arabia one is likely to call up the picture of a hopeless desert. But much of the region is steppe land, a high plain supporting some flocks and even capable of tillage. Nomadism has long held the region in its grip, however, and it is as a sort of "chief of nomads" that Abdullah Ibn Hussein finds it necessary to rule. He holds his "court" not in a palace but in a group of tents which he moves with the seasons.

Amman is not inaccessible. Five hours by automobile over reasonably good roads through the sizzling valley of the Jordan suffice for the trip from Jerusalem to the capital. The Jordan forms the boundary line and across it is an iron bridge. Amman is only about thirty miles from the river, and as the crow flies is hardly more than than sixty miles from Jerusalem. The Hedjaz railway, connecting Damascus and Medina, runs through the town.

HUGE CROWDS TO SEE IRISH PLAY

Notre Dame Expected to Play Before 350,000.

That Notre Dame's famous Fightin' Irish football team will play before 350,000 people during the fall of 1928 is the theory of J. Arthur Haley, business manager of athletics at the university, following two weeks of intensive work acknowledging applications for tickets.

Haley and his staff of assistants began to receive applications for the 1928 tickets on August 1, and the indications are that every game in which the Irish appear will draw a capacity crowd. In addition to three home games, the Notre Dame squad will journey to enemy stadiums for six contests.

Special interest is being shown in the Navy game, which will be played at Soldier field, Chicago, on October 13. Last year Notre Dame played Southern California at Soldier field on the last Saturday in November and 117,000 people witnessed the game. Ten thousand additional seats have been installed at the stadium and Haley says that 120,000 seats will be sold. The Notre Dame athletic office has been besieged with requests for tickets to this game, and it is likely that the Navy-Irish tilt will be the most colorful of the 1928 season.

Memories of the 1926 season, when Carnegie Tech unexpectedly defeated the Irish team, which was then headed for another national title, have served to step up the interest in the Scotch-Irish game, which will be played on Cartier field, November 17. It is the last home game of the season. Haley predicts that this game will be sold out before November 1.

Messages from Los Angeles state that the Southern California-Notre Dame game will be the biggest drawing card the Pacific coast has ever had. The Trojans and their retinue are still stinging under their 7-6 defeat of last fall and will pack the stadium to see the old rivals fight it out again.

Field Goal Seems to Be Passing on in Grid Game

That ancient institution of the gridiron, the field goal, seems to be passing on. Only on rare occasions has it been resorted to, this year, although it is one of the most dramatic, often thrilling plays of the college football repertoire.

Three circumstances have combined to nullify the field goal. The most important one and the most recent, is that example of rule-making wisdom which caused the goal bar to be set back ten yards behind the goal line. This compels the goal kicker to boot the ball ten yards further on each kick, than formerly.

Another reason is the fact that a field goal nets only half the score that a forward pass yields, when a touchdown is scored.

And the final argument is that the loss of the ball invariably follows the failure of a field goal, whereas a try for a scoring forward pass is usually penalized by the loss of one down, merely.

Only when a team's forward passing attack has been nullified by an opponent or when the point after a touch down is to be scored, do teams today fall back on the placement or the drop kick.

ORANG-UTAN PET

It was unusual for a gorilla to be in the zoo.

"I look more like a human being than most of my relatives, too," said the gorilla.

"I come from Africa. Am I not handsome walking upright just as anyone would do?"

The gorilla was really not handsome at all; he was quite ugly.

He was very large and did look quite human, but he hadn't nearly as much sense as the nice orang-utan or the lively, cheerful chimpanzee.

"I'm worth looking at," the gorilla kept saying to himself, and as he looked at the people who hurried to the zoo to see him he chatted and looked at them and said:

"You're all a foolish lot. I don't believe I will stay long in the zoo if you're the ones who're coming to see me.

"Such absurd looking people. And your climate is so different from Africa.

"The zoo is very different from the home I had, very different.

"This zoo is enough to make me cross. There isn't room for me to take all the exercise I want.

"I will have indigestion if I do not take plenty of exercise. Yes, I believe I am already beginning to feel cross.

He Would Look at Himself.

"I don't like zoo life—that is certain—so take a look at me, people, while you can.

"Now is your opportunity. Of course I sometimes like some people.

"I have my pets!"

And the people did come to look at the gorilla for it was unusual to have one in the zoo for even a little while, but the keeper whispered to his beloved orang-utan and said:

"You're the one I like, you are!"

And the orang-utan put his arms around the keeper's neck and kissed him and said:

"The orang-utan is your pet, and loves you, too."

Then the keeper would take the orang-utan into his private room and the orang-utan would play.

Sometimes he would look at himself in the mirror and he would take a special tooth brush the keeper had for him and brush his teeth.

Then he would take another brush and brush himself off very nicely.

Then he would sit on the chair near the mirror and looking at the keeper would say, by means of the expression in his eyes:

"Don't I look nicely now?"

And the keeper would play games with the orang-utan, and then he would give the orang-utan a banana.

The orang-utan would always peel his banana first. He didn't care for banana peels.

After awhile the keeper would take the orang-utan back to his big cage and yard, but often, so very, very often the orang-utan had special liberty and fun back in the keeper's private room.

He enjoyed these times more than anything else, and how he loved it that he was a real pet.

Practically Five Boys

There are four boys and one girl in the family next door. The little girl is the youngest of the group, and being raised with so many brothers, is just as rough and tumble as they.

"Let's see, there are three boys in your family, aren't there?" some one inquired of John, the next to the youngster.

"Oh, no, there's four," corrected the little fellow. "And countin' Jeanie, there's five practic'ly."

Back Yard All Around

Mary had always lived in an apartment in the city where she had no place to play but a little plot of grass in the back yard. One summer she went to visit her aunt in the country.

When it was time to go home at the end of the summer she cried and cried. Her aunt asked her one day why she liked it so in the country and the little girl replied: "'Cause your back yard goes all around the house."

Wished Teacher Luck

Helen, aged six, was eager for school to begin and when she recently met her teacher told her she had already purchased her book, pencil, etc.

Her teacher, feigning surprise, asked, "Why, Helen, are you going to start to school?"

And Helen replied, "Oh, yes, Miss C., and I hope you have good luck with me!"

A Sour Stomach

In the same time it takes a dose of soda to bring a little temporary relief of gas and sour stomach, Phillips Milk of Magnesia has acidity completely checked, and the digestive organs all tranquilized. Once you have tried this form of relief you will cease to worry about your diet and experience a new freedom in eating.

This pleasant preparation is just as good for children, too. Use it whenever coated tongue or fetid breath signals need of a sweetener. Physicians will tell you that every spoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Get the genuine, the name Phillips is important. Imitations do not act the same!

Virtue in Adversity

Virtue is like the precious odors, most fragrant where they are incensed or crushed; for prosperity doth best discover vice; but adversity doth best discover virtue.—Bacon.

HELPED DURING MIDDLE AGE

Woman Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Denver, Colo.—"I have taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and will take more. I am taking it as a tonic to help me through the Change of Life and I am telling many of my friends to take it as I found nothing before this to help me. I had so many bad feelings at night that I could not sleep and for two years I could not go down town because I was afraid of falling. My mother took the Vegetable Compound years ago with good results and now I am taking it during the Change of Life and recommend it."—Mrs. T. A. Miller, 1611 Adams Street, Denver, Colorado.

To mix a little more charity with your judgments.

To spend more time getting the other fellow's viewpoint.

To give your enemies credit for good intentions.

To do these things and see how soon life grows sweeter.

A board and a nail and a can of paint make many a thing look new that ain't.

Carl: "Really?"

Jack: "Yes, I get letters from the leading merchants every so often saying they would like to have me come back and settle."

"Why is it that Goofus always has a cold?"

"Somebody told him that whisky was good for a cold."

Another: "How's that?"
